A THRILLING STORY.

Escape From a Terrible Fate.

In the year 1854 I was in Illinois, and one night met with the adventure which I now propose to relate

I had been traveling a long way on horse back, entirely unaccompanied.

My road lay through a thinly-settled, desolate region. The last house I had passed was many miles behind me, and I began to feel weary and depressed. The night was intensely dark. Neither moon nor stars were shining. The darkness, the silence, the long, weary way, exercised an oppressive influence on my spirits, and, though by no means a coward, would have given anything for a little pleasanter situation.

I spurred up my horse and dashed onward. In this way I proceeded several miles further. Suddenly a low rumbling noise attracted my attention. I listened, and in a few moments it was repeated It was distant thunder, and a storm was coming up. Here was a nice situation, and I shuddered in anticipation.

Again I spurred on, hoping to find some place of shelter before the full force of the storm should burst over me Onward I galloped, but without any apparent success. Nothing in the shape of habitation greeted my eyes. I began to despair. All the time, too, the flashes of lightning were growing more and more frequent and glaring, the pealing of the thunder nearer and louder.—Finally the storm burst in its fury. For a while I beat against it determinedly; but the violence of the hurricane was at length too much for me, and I was compelled to stop and seek the uncertain shelter of a gigantic tree, much as I was opposed to such a course. However, I had no other alternative, for brave the storm I could not.

The deepest and most intense darkness enveloped everything. Except just when the heavens were lighted up by flashes of lightning, I could not see a foot before my nose, and every other sound was completely absorbed by the fierce bellowing of the tempest.

I dismounted and groped my way to the nearest tree. A flash of lightning showed me it was one of the largest magnitude. Beneath its far spreading branches I might be as comfortable, if not as safe, as I would beneath a roof.

After attending somewhat to my horse, I divested myself of my wet outer garments and disposed my weary body to enjoy as much comfort as was compatible under the circumstances.

The tempest continued with no sign of abatement. Never before had I seen such lightning, never before heard such thunder. It was terrifying, and I could not resist the temptation to shudder. Ever since that night a thunder storm has occasioned me considerable uneasiness.

In this manner half an hour may have passed. Still the storm howled on in the most furious and terrible manner—still the loud thunder cracked and roared—still the lightning flashed with blinding brightness.

Suddenly I felt, or thought I felt, something brush slightly against me. I leaped to my feet and quietly demanded:

"Who's there?"

I listened, got no answer; and nothing was to be heard above the roar of the tempest.

The thought struck me that it might be some wild beast. If such should prove to be the case, it would be almost impossible to guard against its attack under such circumstances; and it made my heart beat like a steam engine to think of the danger in which I was probably standing. I felt for my pistols; they were in the holsters, and I dare not move from the spot where I was standing for fear of provoking the attack that I dreaded and which I was in such a poor position to resist.

Some minutes passed, and all of a sudden the weight of a strong hand or the claw of a wild beast descended on my right shoulder. Almost at the same instant, and before I had time even to think, I felt the same feeling on my left shoulder.

I drew my knife—the only weapon I had about me—suddenly stepped back a few paces, and without any thought or design, demanded who was there, if it was anything human.

At that moment a vivid flash of lightning illuminated the surrounding darkness, and for an instant rendered everything visible. I was no longer in doubt. A few steps before me two ferocious and bloodthirsty looking men were standing.

Plainly enough they were both cut throats and thieves, or, if they were not, their brutal appearance belied them wonderfully. Two more diabolical looking wretches it has never been my ill luck to encounter. That they meant no good, I had no earthly reason to doubt; and situated as I was, the prospect was anything but pleasant.

Both the desperadoes held a pistol in their hands, and the weapons were leveled at my heart.

All this I saw at a quick glance, and then again the deepest darkness enveloped everything.

What should I do? I thought. Attempt to reach my horse and trust to Providence for my final rescue? To my mind that seemed my chance, for, in an encounter with two such brawny villains, my prospect would be very slim. Whatever course I adopted, though, I must be quick, or the next flash of lightning would betray my purpose.

Quickly I stooped down to the ground, and prepared to crawl away in the direction of my horse. What the two cut throats were doing I could not tell, for the din of the tempest prevented me from hearing any customary sounds. Their ears, however, were sharper than mine for at the first movement I made a loud coarse voice exclaimed:

"Tain't no use, stranger, for ye can't git away from h'ar till ye've paid toll. We steal for a livin', we do, an' we kill for the fun 'o the thing, so yer may know what ye've got to expect. Keep still, is my advice, or afore yer know it, yer'll git a bullet inter yer carcass.

For a moment I hesitated, and in that moment another flash of lightning lit up the surrounding scene.

There stood the two outlaws, with their fiendish-looking eyes wickedly glaring on me.

The flash of lightning also revealed my own position to them, and the sight they set up a loud and brutal laugh.

"Must think we're a couple of ninnies, Jake!" remarked one to the other.

"The cuss don't know we're sorter owls, an' kin see better in the dark nor in the light," responded number two.

"Fancies he'll scape us, hi guess!" continued the first speaker. "Wall if he does, he'll be the first man ever did that sort o' thing."

"When he gets away, hi 'ope he'll let us know it," rejoined the other, confidently.

That I had unfortunately fell into the hands of two of the worst sort of outlaws, everything more and more betokened. I knew well with such men the life of a human being was of no more account than the life of a dog, and inwardly resolved only to part with it, if part with it I must, in an attempt to escape, however desperate the adventure might be under such circumstances.

It was now about time for another flash of lightning, and straightening myself up to avoid suspicion, I waited for it to pass.

The next moment it came, with almost blinding brilliancy.

The outlaws had not moved a step, but remained as at first, closely regarding the spot where I was standing.

"Come, stranger!" yelled the same one who had addressed me before, "it's about time we had a better understanding all 'roun'. Yer see, we don't like to fool long an' we've been playin' with yer till we're about tired, we are. Yer money or your life's what we want, an' if yer don't like that, we'll take both without askin'. What d'yer say, stranger—what shall in be? Ef yer for a fight, sing out, an' hi guess we kin accommodate yer. Fightin's our element, an' we're always ready for a scrimmage. Now, ef yer don't do somethin' at wunst, we'll fire a round inter yer, we will sartin."

During the time occupied by the outlaw in speaking, I had been preparing myself for my attempt. Summoning all my courage, all my energy, all my determination, I assumed an attitude most favorable to my purpose and bounded forward at desperate speed, in hopes of effecting my escape.

The outlaws uttered a loud yell, and then let me know that they understood my purpose and were following in my tracks. But I expected as much, and consequently was not at all surprised.

Two muscular hounds placed me beside my horse, and with a single spring I vaulted into the saddle. I thought myself safe then, but at that very moment I felt violent hands laid upon me; and a flash of lightning soon showed me that if I had been quick, my assailants had not been far behind me.

I desperately attempted to start my horse, but before I could do so, the outlaws dragged me from my seat and bore me to the ground.

"No go, stranger," cried one of them. "Yer can't git away from us, no how; yer can't, so you'd better not try."

I was down on the ground on my back, and the desperadoes were stooping over me on either side, with their knees pressed tightly against my chest. Still, however, I resisted, for I was not exactly the man to give up without a struggle, desperate as might be my chances, and at the moment they seemingly could not well have been in a worse condition.

My assailants grew furious, and handled me in anything but a gentle manner, but desperation gave to me a new lease of strength and they found me no mean antagonist. By an effort of all my powers I at length managed to regain my feet.—Unfortunately, I had lost my knife in the struggle, and was entirely unarmed. Not so with the outlaws, for they still had the numerous dirks which they were making every effort to use upon my person

Meanwhile the tempest continued with its original violence, and, in the din of the storm almost every sound of the desperate conflict was entirely lost.

At length my superhuman efforts began to weary me. I began to grow discouraged, too, seeing little chance of my rescue. My protracted resistance tended also to excite the blackest passions of my deadly assailants. They tore at me, and cursed and blasphemed in the most terrible manner.

Suddenly I caught my right foot, and fell heavily to the ground. The concussion stunned me, and before I regained my feet, the outlaws were again pressing me down.

"Kill him! kill him!" cried one, as he clutched me by the throat, and drew back his arm.

"Cut out his heart, ches him!" rejoined the other, in a furious tone.

"God have mercy on me!" I inwardly ejaculated, fully expecting to receive my death wound before the expiration of another moment.

The arms of the outlaws were about to descend, carrying death to me—I could not see it, but I intuitively felt that it was so when the whole scene was suddenly lighted up by the most blinding flash of lightning I ever beheld. Instantaneously with the lightning the deafening thunders peeled forth. That was all I knew at that time, for instantly I lost all consciousness. When I recovered my suspended powers the storm had passed away and the sun was shining brightly. I was lying upon the ground, and felt weak and sore, but otherwise was not injured. Beside me lay the two outlaws, buried in the sleep of death. They had been struck by lightning, and just at the very moment when their hands were uplifted to deprive me of life. The great tree beneath which I had taken refuge was shivered into atoms, and the whole scene was one of death and desolation.

Under such circumstances my own escape seemed miraculous, and I humbly thanked God for His infinite mercy. The lightning had saved me from the outlaws, and the Almighty had saved me from the lightning. I had been doubly preserved.

Strange as it may seem, my horse had escaped; and with a full heart, I mounted his back and started on my journey. That night in the wilderness I have never forgotted, nor is it likely I ever shall.

Volcanic Eruption in the Sandwich Islands --One Hundred Persons Killed--A New Island Formed.

A dispatch from San Francisco says the bark Cornet, from the Sandwich Islands, brings accounts of a terrible volcanic eruption by Mauna Loa, which began its demonstrations on March 27th. On the 28 one hundred earthquake shocks were felt, and during the two weeks following, to April 13th, two thousand earthquake shocks occured. At Waischina, the earth opened in many places, and a tidal wave sixty feet high rose over the tops of the cocoa trees for a quarter of a mile inland, sweeping human beings, houses, and everything moveable before it. A terrible shock prostrated churches and houses, and killed many persons. In all one hundred lives were lost, besides a thousand horses and cattle. The craters emitted fire, rocks and lava, and a river of red hot lava five or six miles long flowed to the sea, at the rate of ten miles per hour, destroying everything before it, and forming an island in the sea. A new crater, two miles wide, opened, and threw rocks and streams of fire a thousand feet high. Streams of lava rolled to the sea.

At one time the illumination extended fifty miles, at night. The lava has pushed out from the shore one mile.

At Waischina, three miles from the shore, an island rose suddenly, sending forth a volume of steam and smoke, while the Kono vessel was passing, spattering mud on the vessel. The greatest shock occurred April 2d, prior to the eruption. There was a great shower of ashes and pumice during the great shock. The swinging motion of the earth was dreadful, so that no person could stand. In the midst of this tremendous shock an eruption of red earth poured down the mountain, rushing across the plain three miles in three minutes, and then ceased. Then came the great tidal wave, and then the streams of lava. The villages on the shore were all destroyed by this wave. The earth opened under the sea and reddened the water. The earth eruption swallowed thirty persons, and the sea many more. Great suffering and terror prevailed in the district, and the whole region was affected.

The sloop Live Yankee has been dispatched with provisions, &c., to rescue and relieve.

The gases that issued afterward destroyed both vegetable and animal life. Bottomless fissures opened in the mountain side. A lava stream flowed under the ground, breaking out in four jets six miles from the sea, and throwing lava and stones 1,000 and 1 500 feet high.

Numerous extensive land slides accompanied the other phenomena, destroying life and property. The summit and side of a hill, fifteen hundred feet in height, were thrown a thousand feet over the tops of trees and landed in the valley below. A large stream of water has burst from the mountain where the earth eruption occurred. The base of the volcano is about thirty miles in circumference and is desolated. At least half a million dollars' worth of property is destroyed. Many visitors had gone from Honolulu and will go from San Francisco. The worst is thought to be over, but the lava flow continues.

—The richest ten men in New York city are taxed on $50,000,000, but are worth, probably, three times as much. Of these ten millionaires, one comes from pure Yankee stock, and one from the Hebrew, four are of Germanic stock, two from the Huguenot French, and two from the Scotch or Scotch-Irish.

—A Boston man has a toy barometer on exhibition, which consists of a miniature cottage with two doors. At one of these stands a man clad in purple and fine linen; while at the other appears a female arrayed in like apparel. If there are signs of rain, the man steps boldly out of doors while the woman shrinks into the cottage. But if the signs are favorable, the woman goes forth to shop and gossip, while the man stays at home and tends house and baby.

—The Japanese Commissioners who visited this country a year or two since are reported to have carried back with them $30,000 worth of scientific and other valuable books, and the New-York publishers, the Putnams, are understood to have recently filled out an order from Japan, for school books chiefly, to the amount of ten tons weight. Fifteen young Japanese had been sent to this country for an education, and about as many more to England.

ACCIDENT ON THE OIL CREEK AND ALLEGHENY VALLEY RAILWAY.—Yesterday afternoon an accident occurred on Conductor Sweetser's through freight train bound north, by which Mr. James Geary, a brakeman, was severely injured. It appears that the bell rope had become disarranged and Mr. G. went on top of the car next to the caboose for the purpose of putting it in order. As the train was passing around the curve at the night-cap he lost his balance and was precipitated to the ground, striking a corner of the platform of the caboose in the descent. He fell outside the rails with one of his arms lying partly on one of them, and while in this position the caboose passed by, the wheels cutting away portions of the flesh from his arm. The flagman at the night cap, who was within a few feet of where the accident occurred, went to the assistance of the injured man at once. The train was moving slowly at the time and it was stopped and the injured man taken into the caboose and brought to Titusville. He was removed from the caboose to the Morey House as soon as the train arrived, and Drs. Young and Jennings were called. His wounds were dressed, and last evening he was in as comfortable a condition as could be expected. The unfortunate man is a resident of Corry, and has been in the employ of the Oil Creek and Allegheny River Railway Company for some time.

THE National Convention of German Turners, prior to its adjournment at Boston on Thursday, passed resolutions sustaining the measures of reconstruction enacted by Congress, calling for the payment of the national debt and interest in accordance with the promises made by the Government, and asking for a gradual consolidation of the different loans into one debt, with a uniform rate of interest. The resolutions also call for the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine, ask that the Tariff rates shall be fixed upon the equalization principle, and urge compulsory measures for the attendance of children at our public schools.

A New President.

A great day this, at Washington, anxious hearts, loud tongues, a day for cursing or rejoicing, we may safely prophecy. An era ever memorable in our annals; a crisis in the affairs of our Government is this Twelfth day of May, A. D. 1868. A day for the whole country to hold its breath, as on the eve of some battle, some calamitous defeat or notable, glorious victory over the enemies of the country's peace and honor. We believe that the Senate will convict Johnson, because we believe the law and the evidence are clear and conclusive, of his guilt of the crimes and misdemeanors charged. Apostacy of party leaders damage to a party's cause are of course hard to bear—are deplorable, odious. But they are nothing in comparison with other considerations. Let impeachment fail and we may look for a sea of Trouble to overwhelm us. The precedent in favor of Executive excesses and usurpations, will be incalculably disastrous—not only in the immediate, continuing administration of Johnson—but, in the future, for generations to come. Let Johnson carry the day, and we shall have collisions and armed resistance to laws, incited if not directed by the President. We shall have a President no longer, but a King to rule over us. But the Senate cannot be faithless, mercenary, disloyal. It cannot cover itself with popular odium. It will not invite new perils to the country. It will observe the sanctity of its oath. It must show reverence for the laws it has aided to enact. It cannot falsify its record. It cannot scandalize or destroy itself. With Wade in the Presidential Chair, the country will feel a security unknown since the taking off of Lincoln. It will feel a trust in his talents, in his principles, in his manhood; a confidence inspired by his ripe experience in the public councils, and his consistency, his courage, his fidelity, on all occasions, to the great Party with which he has been identified from its organization, which he has done so much to establish and to maintain.

Ku Klux Klan Outrages.

That the rebel organization known as the Ku Klux Klan is no myth, is proved by the numerous outrages which are everywhere committed in the South. The latest of these is reported of a young man named Alvah A. Richardson, of Cleveland, who went last month to Middle Tennessee to buy cedar land, the cedar to be cut and used for posts. He was well supplied with money, and made some advantageous purchases. The fact that a "Yankee" was in the State buying land came to the knowledge of the Klan, and as Richardson was traveling through a forest near Shelbyville, he was accosted by a party of the Ku Klux, who told him that they heard he was hiring negroes to cut timber, and he had got to die. He turned to escape, and being mounted on a good horse, he succeeded in getting out of range, after a dozen bullets had whizzed harmlessly by him. Unfortunately he had not got far before his horse stumbled and fell, breaking Richardson's shoulder, and otherwise injuring him so that he became unconscious. The Ku Klux followed and would have killed him, only he was near a party of negroes whom he had employed, and who took him into their shanties. They afterwards escorted him to Shelbyville, where the services of a surgeon were procured, and he was made as comfortable as possible. The same night a letter was mysteriously handed to him, dated "Chamber of Death," and having the daggers and other symbols of the KuKlux order. The letter warned him to leave the State by the next northern train, or he would receive another visit. Wounded and disabled as he was, Richardson felt as though he could not leave; but the surgeon and friends in the house where he stopped warned him that the threat of the KuKlux was not to be disregarded. He accordingly packed up and started for Nashville, where he was put aboard a steamer for Cincinnati. He arrived home safely last Saturday.

The Crops.

The growing crops are regarded by the public at large with lively interest. It would be surprising were it otherwise, when we take into consideration the general condition of the country and the high prices prevailing for the necessaries of life. The future of the business community and of the laboring classes, even more than that of the farmer, depends upon the result of the next harvest. If this shall be favorable, business will prosper, and the necessities of the masses of the people will be greatly relieved. On the other hand, if the harvest should fail to a serious extent, pinching times and a dragging trade can not be prevented.

What then is the crop prospect? Two weeks ago it was gloomy. A severe winter, late spring and unseasonable frost, had damaged the wheat, and was supposed to have destroyed the fruit. But good growing weather has since materially changed the appearance of things. Wheat fields that promised trifling crops are now looking pretty well, and the fruit, it turns out, is, in the main, safe. There are sections in which wheat will partially fail, but, upon the whole, the prospects now are favorable for a better aggregate crop than has been realized with in three years passed. In the Western States the crops are generally an average in quality, and wheat is more than an average in number of acres sown. Fruit of all kinds promises a large yield.

Of the spring crops nothing, of course, can be said as yet, except that farmers, stimulated by high prices, and the general deficiency in supplies, are doing their best in the way of planting. The ground is in good order to give an early start to seed, and the genial sunshine and warm showers will soon bring vegetation rapidly forward.

It may be said, therefore, that the prospects are favorable for a year of plenty. Of course the final crisis has not yet been passed or even reached, and the sanguine hopes of the present may be blasted at a later period, but just now there is everything to encourage the farmer to go ahead

NEWSPAPER CHANGE.—Mr. D. W. Wilder has withdrawn from the Rochester (N. Y.) Express, with which he has been connected for three years past, and has resumed the editorial charge of the Leavenworth (Kansas) Conservative, a paper which he assisted to establish eight years ago, and in which he now owns the controlling interest.

Mr. Wilder was identified with the early political history of Kansas, and was among the foremost in the struggle which made her a free State. Driven from St. Joseph, Missouri, for the fearless advocacy of anti-slavery principles, he re established his Free Press at Elwood, on the Kansas side of the river, and there continued its publication till the adoption of the Topeka Constitution, and the admission of Kansas into the Union. He assisted in the organization of the Republican party at Osawatomie, and no man connected with the Kansas press labored more energetically and efficiently for its success, or achieved in the line of his professional duty a more enviable personal distinction and popularity. The Conservative was an intentional misnomer. It was always in the van of progressive radicalism, and enjoying, as it did, the unshaken confidence of the people, became a power in the State. A sincere and earnest man, perfect in his integrity, steadfast in his political convictions and unwavering in his personal attachments, Mr. Wilder will be cordially welcomed back to the post of professional duty in the State of his early adoption. As it is fully three years since we have seen a copy of the Conservative, we hope hereafter to receive it in daily exchange.

Mount Hope Gardens and Nurseries—The Largest in the World.

The Rochester N. Y. Express gives the following extended notice of the Nursery business, which is carried on so extensively in and around the city of Rochester, describing particularly the celebrated establishment of Ellwanger & Barry, which has no equal in point of extent, and quality of cultivation in this country, and which ships its fruit and ornamental trees, its flowers, shrubs and plants to all parts of the United States. It is noteworthy that year by year, increased attention seems to be paid, in town and country, to the decoration of homesteads, to the planting of choice trees and the laying out of fine gardens: a labor whose recompense far exceeds its cost, and which affords one of the most refined of pleasures. The Express says:

"Rochester is not only the most important nursery center in the United States, but it is, and has been for a number of years, the most important one in the world. One of the physical advantages that this branch of trade enjoys in this section, is a well adapted soil, of which all varieties, from a light sand to a heavy clay, can be found. This non-uniformity of soil is especially favorable, since but few of the many varieties of fruit stock are partial to soils of the same quality and texture. The climate of this locality, owing to prevailing winds and surface depressions, is also all that a nuryeryman could desire. But aside from these natural helps, it has taken a vast amount of scientific research and practical labor to bring the business up to its present position. A few of the many who have been engaged in this occupation have conducted their business with careful studies and experiments, and to these few it owes its present high standard.

"Among those that have given pomology the attention that it deserves are Messrs. Ellwanger & Barry, the proprietors of the Mount Hope nurseries, and to such an extent have they carried their study of the physiology of trees and plants, that for reliable authority on arboriculture, they are only equalled by such men as Downing and Thomas in the practical part of the business, especially in creating a large and lucrative trade, they have outstripped all others, and to-day they are cultivating the largest nursery in the world.

"Their nursery lands, of which they have over five hundred acres, are covered with stock, which embraces all the fruits natural to this latitude. To give some idea of the variety in which some of the fruits are cultivated, we will state that the firm have three hundred and seventy-five varieties of apple trees, one hundred and fifty of which are of select and well tried kinds. Of pears they have about four hundred varieties, many of which are not, as yet, recommended, being new sorts; of this fruit they not only raise the trees in great variety, but grow large quantities of the fruit. They have been known to exhibit over two hundred varieties of pears at one time. This fine fruit stock finds a ready market in almost every State in the Union, not excepting those on the Pacific slope.

"In connection with this immense fruit tree business is an ornamental department, that will compare well with the establishments of Philadelphia and Europe, which unlike this, do a strictly ornamental business. Here are nearly two hundred and fifty varieties of decidious trees, each classed with its proper genus or family. In this class of trees there are some remarkable specimens of tree foliage and form. Of evergreens they have nearly twenty families, representing over fifty varieties. Among the new and rare sorts, is an Arbor Vitæ, the 'Tom Thumb,' which originated on their grounds, and which will be found to be of great value in ornamenting small grounds. To make their evergreen list complete, they have introduced the Gigantea 'Big Tree' of California. These trees being of slow growth, persons in need of a reminder of the brevity of human life, would do well to plant and rear an infant from this majestic family.

"Foremost in their large stock of shrubs and plants, are those queens of flowers; the roses, of which they have hundreds of varieties. All sorts can be found, from the good old fashioned 'Cabbage' and 'Damask,' to the delicate and fragrant 'Noisette' and 'Tea.' Of Carnations, Pinnies, Phloxes, Chrysanthemums and Dahlias, they have large collections; of the latter they have upwards of one hundred varieties of the newest and best that can be produced in Europe or America.

"In their large hot and greenhouses, of which they have eleven in number, can be found camellias, Cacti, Fuchsias, Verbenas, Petunias and Geraniums, of the new and rare kinds; also, a large collections of ferns, that would do credit to any place, aside from a Botanic Garden. In cut flowers and wreaths they have an extensive trade.

"At Easter, large quantities of flowers for church decoration are sent to Buffalo, Syracuse, Utica, Albany, Montreal and to many other large places, which like the above cities, appear to lack the animation and skill necessary to the production of their own pasilea. Their lawns are tastefully shaped and well kept. To see finer ones, or perhaps any as fine, one must go to England, or to some other country, having a more humid climate than ours. At this season, these gardens are thronged with visitors and purchasers. Among the latter are many poor people people who with commendable pride, buy a few flowering plants for home adornment. An hour's ramble within this domain of 'Poma' and 'Flora,' unless taken for scientific observation, will be as entertaining as one taken in the great botanic gardens of Liverpool, or even in the world-renowned Jardins des Plantes.

The Grand Army of the Republic.

There is generally a feeling of distrust felt towards secret organizations that have not been long established, and they are often the fountains of much evil. The societies formed by the Union soldiers of the North, and those formed by the rebels of the South are very characteristic of the men and their objects. On the one hand the Ku-Klux-Klan, with its mummeries and midnight meetings, its inhuman murders and standing "committees on assassinations," is the natural off-spring of slavery and treason; a fitting organization for the guards of Libby, Belle Isle, and Andersonville—for the sackers of Lawrence and the murderers of Fort Pillow.

On the other hand, we find the men who wore the blue associating under the proud name of "The Grand Army of the Republic."

Unlike the Kuklux organizations, this has for its objects the bringing again together the men who stood shoulder to shoulder in the dark days of the war, the caring for the wounded and weak, the comrades widows and orphans, the cementing in one brotherhood in peace the men whose arms and blood kept our land together in war.

Hon. John A. Logan, Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has issued General Orders No. 11, from which we take the following extracts:

"The 30th day of May, 1868, is designated for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defence of their country during the late rebellion, and whose bodies lie in almost every city, and village, and hamlet, and church-yard in the land. In this observance no form of ceremony is prescribed, but posts and comrades will in their own way arrange such fitting services and testimonials of respect as circumstances may permit.

"We are organized, comrades, as our regulations tell us, for the purpose, among other things, 'of preserving and strengthening those kind and fraternal feelings which have bound together the soldiers, sailors, and marines who united to suppress the late rebellion.' What can aid more to assure this result than by cherishing tenderly the memory of our heroic dead, who made their breasts a barricade between our country and its foes.

"Let us, then, at the time appointed, gather around their sacred remains and garland the passionless mounds above them with the choicest flowers of spring time; let us raise above them the dear old flag they saved from dishonor; let us in this solemn presence renew our pledges to aid and assist those whom they have left among us a sacred charge upon a nation's gratitude—the soldier's and sailor's widow and orphan.

"It is the purpose of the Commander-in-Chief to inaugurate this observance with the hope that it will be kept up from year to year, while a survivor of the war remains to honor the memory of his departed comrades. He earnestly desires the public press to call attention to this order, and lead its friendly aid to bringing it to the notice of comrades in all parts of the country in time for simultaneous compliance therewith."

Life and Death.

I gaze upon the streets below,
The busy throng go to and fro,
The stream of life goes rushing past,
Like snow flakes on the wintry blast.

With tottering step and watery eye,
One bent with years goes slowly by,
Nor marks the youth, with conscious pride,
Who passes swiftly by his side.

The matron gray, the blooming girl,
Go floating in the giddy whirl;
The grave, the gay, the thoughtless fair,
All I all are represented there.

How many e'er to-morrow's sun,
From east to west his course has run,
Will pay the debt, then lost, and lay
Beneath the flowers of early May.

EDARO.

ACQUITTED.—The trial of E. F. Kelly for the shooting of Thomas Sharpley, has been concluded in New York. The result was a verdict of not guilty—the jury agreeing that it was a case of justifiable homicide. The Recorder endorsed the opinion of counsel for the defence that homicide was justifiable in a case where a man supposed that he was going either to be killed or receive grievous bodily injury.

The announcement of the foreman was received with cheers. Mr. Kelly was then surrounded by his friends and warmly congratulated on the result of the trial.

As the parties in this unfortunate tragedy were generally known throughout the country as negro minstrels, of no second-rate ability, the case occasioned a wide-spread sensation in the city and country at the time, and the verdict was looked for with interest.

GENERAL JOHN M. PALMER has been nominated for Governor by the Republicans of Illinois. He is one of the leading Radicals of the State, and was the leading competitor of Hon. Lyman Trumbull for the United States Senatorship from Illinois at the last election. He was nominated against his protest, but will take the office and make a good Governor. General Logan was renominated for Congressman at large. He has few equals as a stump-speaker in Southern Illinois latitudes, and will do efficient work in the coming campaign. Illinois is good for Grant, Palmer and Logan by seventy thousand majority.

THE soda fountains were in full blast yesterday. The Soldiers' Orphans by invitation of Clark & Co. marched down to the Merchants' Exchange drug store, and were refreshed from the marble fountain, after which they complimented the establishment with three cheers. Mr. Allen's soda was also on draft yesterday, and the passers by were invited to walk up and partake, free of charge.

ELASTIC SPONGE.—Strong & Hoyt, 145 State St, Rochester, N. Y., have an exclusive agency for selling this article manufactured up into mattrasses, pillows, chair and carriage cushions. It is only a short time since sponge has been used for this purpose. The sponge is cut into small pieces and chemically treated and in this way has been found to be better adapted for those uses than any other article. We saw a bale of it weighing one pound, compressed and held into a space three inches in thickness by six in length and four in breadth, when cut apart expand on the counter to over three feet in length. None of the insect tribe will harbor in it. Its wonderful elasticity, unrivalled cleanliness, combine to place it in the front rank for such purposes as it is now used. THE

ROBERTS

TORPEDO COMPANY.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The following is a brief summary of the Rights and Claims of the Roberts Torpedo Company, which rights they intend to enforce against all parties violating the same:

The rights of said Company consist of three Patents issued and granted by the United States to E. A. L. Roberts for explosion of Torpedoes in oil bearing rock, together with the assignment of six other Patents for the exclusive right to use Nitro-Glycerine and other powerful explosive materials for the uses and purposes in the other Patents mentioned.

In the various legal conflicts relating to the Patents above mentioned, volumes of testimony have been taken and some of the best legal talent in the country has been employed in opposition to the Company, but after a contest of over two years, it was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States that Col. Roberts was the first to discover the practicability and invent the means of increasing the capacity of oil wells in the oil bearing rock by exploding Torpedoes therein.

That since the organization of said Company, in order to protect their rights, it has been deemed necessary to commence suits against several persons, among whom are Alexander Hamar, Albert E. Nickerson, and Kent & Mellner, (operators,) and Senate & Parke, (manufacturers.) That during the trial of said several cases, the pretended claim of William Reed and others in relation to being the discoverers and first to apply Torpedoes in oil wells, was fully investigated, and notwithstanding the said pretended claim of Reed and others, judgment was obtained in the United States Court against the several parties defendants in said suits, and permanent injunctions issued against all of them. And in order further to protect the interests of said Company, suits have been commenced in the United States Court and injunctions obtained against Frederick T. Munson, of Reno, Venango county, Pa., and George W. VanVliet, of Pithole, in said county. And in addition to the above suits, in which injunctions have already been obtained, in order to protect the just rights and interests of said Company, a suit has been commenced against Sherman Camp, of Rouseville, and proceedings instituted against the Reed Torpedo Company, of Reno, Pa.; William Reed, William Phillips Ralph Petibone and J. B. Stubbs, officers of said Reed Torpedo Company, their agents and employees and all other persons known to have purchased Torpedoes of them, or any of them.

In view of the benefits resulting from the use of Torpedoes and the liberal patronage of the community, in order that all parties may avail themselves of them, this Company is prepared to furnish Torpedoes at a price much less than heretofore.

While the Company do not court litigation they deem it proper to place these facts before the public in order that innocent parties may not be led into difficulty by false statements of individuals, or circulars of Companies, who are pirating their rights, as suits will be immediately brought against all persons, who, either use or purchase Torpedoes of any except them or their authorized agents, as their Patents cover the exclusive right to explode Torpedoes in oil wells.

IN COURT.

At an adjourned term of the Circuit Court of the United States, for the Northern District of New York, in the second circuit held at the City Hall, in the city of Albany, the 28th day of January, in the year of our Lord 1868.

PRESENT:

The Honorable NATHAN K. HALL, Judge.

JACOB H. SHEAR & JOSEPH PACKARD, vs. GEORGE R. BELL & JOHN M. ROCKWELL. } In Equity.

It is further ordered, adjudged and decreed, that a perpetual injunction be issued in this suit against the defendants, restraining them from further infringements of said Patent No. 51,408, dated Dec. 5th, 1865, for improvements in cooking stoves, pursuant to and in accordance with the prayer of the Bill of Complaint.

(Signed) A. A. ROWE, Clerk.

The above suit was instituted for infringement of the Patent securing the manner of lifting the ash pan in the hearth of the American Cooking Stove, and for the combination of the balled ash pan. We have repeatedly cautioned the public against selling or using stoves with these improvements not manufactured by us. All persons now selling or using stoves with these improvements in violation of the above injunction, without license from us, will be liable to fine and imprisonment.

Heretofore we have in our circulars, alluded to a series of experiments being made with Nitro Glycerine and other explosives. We now announce that we have succeeded, even beyond our most sanguine expectations as regards the safety of handling' also the unprecedented force and power manifested by a skillful combination whereby the size of the Torpedo is lessened and the force many times multiplied and are now prepared to operate on wells with any of the above named explosives - either with our improved combination or our old Combination Torpedo, which has a recorded utility too well known to need mention here.

A Library of Universal Information.

THE NEW

AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA:

A Popular Dictionary of General Knowledge.

EDITED BY

GEORGE RIPLEY AND CHARLES A. DANA,

AIDED BY A NUMEROUS SELECT CORPS OF WRITERS, IN ALL BRANCHES OF SCIENCE ART AND LITERATURE.

In 16 large volumes, 8vo.

750 double column pages in each volume.

The leading claims to public consideration which the New American Cyclopædia possesses may be thus briefly stated:

"1. It surpasses all other works in the fullness and ability of the articles relating to the United States.

"2. No other work contains so many reliable biographies of the leading men of this and other nations. In this respect it is far superior even to the more bulky Encyclopædia Britannica.

"3. The best minds in this country have been employed in enriching its pages with the latest data, and the most recent discoveries in every branch of manufacture, mechanics, and general science.

"4. It is a library in itself, where every topic is treated, and where information can be gleaned which will enable a student, if he is so disposed, to consult other authorities, thus affording him an invaluable key to knowledge.

"5. It is neatly printed, with readable type, on good paper, and contains a most copious index.

"6. It is the only work which gives anything approaching correct descriptions of cities and towns of America, or embraces reliable statistics showing the wonderful growth of all sections."

Every one that reads, every one that mingles in society, is constantly meeting with allusions to subjects on which he needs and desires further information. In conversation, in trade, in professional life, on the farm, in the family, practical questions are continually arising which no man, well read or not, can always satisfactorily answer. If a little reference are at hand, they are consulted, and not only is the curiosity gratified, and stock of knowledge increased, but perhaps information is gained and ideas are suggested that will directly contribute to the business success of the party concerned.

A Cyclopædia is pre-eminently the work for our country and generation. This is the age of steam. No one has time to grope among a hundred different works for every little fact required, without the certainty of finding it at last. With a Cyclopædia, embracing every conceivable subject, and having its topics alphabetically arranged, not a moment is lost. The matter in question is found at once, digested, condensed, stripped of all that is irrelevant and unnecessary, and verified by a comparison of the best authorities. Moreover, while only men of fortune can collect a library complete in all the departments of knowledge, a Cyclopædia worth in itself for purposes of reference at least a thousand volumes, is within the reach of all,—the clerk, the merchant, the professional man, the farmer, the mechanic. In a country like ours, where the humblest may be called to responsible positions requiring intelligence and general information, the value of such a work cannot be over-estimated.

"It is an enterprise of immense value to the public and ought to be in every library, public and private, as an invaluable book of reference."—Atlas and Argus, Albany, N. Y.

"We can confidently and conscientiously recommend the 'Annual Cyclopædia' to all who would have an accurate and readable history of contemporary events close at hand and as a safe work of reference."—Evening Traveller.

"It is indeed a most excellent work. It is thorough and reliable, and just such a work as is greatly needed, a faithful chronicler of important events too numerous to be remembered, and of too much account to be lost."—Cleveland Daily Plain Dealer.
